Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a liquid crystal display (LCD), and more particularly, to an in-plane switching (IPS) mode LCD and a method of fabricating the same. 2. Discussion of the Related Art As the information age progresses, display devices are being developed to be light and thin. Accordingly, flat panel displays (or FPDs), such as liquid crystal display (LCD) devices, plasma display panel (PDP) devices, and electro-luminescence displays (ELD) have been developed. Some FPDs, such as the LCD devices, are being replaced by a new display device, and the new display device is a thin film transistor liquid crystal display (TFT-LCD) device. A TFT-LCD device makes use of a thin film transistor which controls the amount of light transmitted through each pixel area of the TFT-LCD device. The TFT-LCD device is advantageous as compared to conventional image display devices (such as cathode ray tubes (CRTs) or the like), in that it has a high resolution and a high picture quality, and the device is lightweight and occupies small space. In the TFT-LCD device,

Click About DA-Formmaker. Click Help. . A: There are two kinds of serial number in DA-Formmaker. You need to unlock the first (hidden) key for the program to load the second (visible). When the software is installed, there is an activation key on the registration CD (or on a website). This is a file that contains a serial number, and is stored on the registration CD (or website) during the installation process. The.reg file contains a 32-bit combination of these two pieces of data. The first two bytes of the serial number are 0x006A. The first two bytes of the activation key are 0x0554. The two bytes are concatenated to form the serial number. The activation key is hidden from the user; to unlock the key, the user has to download an activation code from the online registration center. This key is then copied to the registration CD (or.reg file). If the software is allowed to run on the user's computer, it stores the hidden key on the registry, and can use it if the user does not upload the activation code. You have to unlock the activation key in the program to unlock the registration key, and to allow the program to load. You can also find details in the documentation available
